ACKNOWLEDGEMENTS

The authors extend their gratitude to all who helped make the task of writing this book possible. Some of you answered what may have seemed an unending stream of questions and requests for written records, photographs and illustrations. A special thank you goes to the people of St. Paul and St. George islands. Even though Betty's trip to St. Paul Island in the year 2000 was not intended for research, it gave her the pleasure of meeting the people themselves in a variety of settings including, an island picnic, their offices, and in some of their homes. Everyone was friendly and forthcoming with historical stories and traditions. Betty especially wants to acknowledge the access to historical materials at the public school, as well as her conversations with school librarian Anita Carden, her husband School Superintendent Jim Carden, former City Manager John R. Mercurief, and City Clerk Phyllis Swetzof. She also very much appreciated an unexpected oral history of the island when she was invited in for tea by Darlene Melovidov and her husband, John W.

The authors are especially indebted to Sonja Kromann, librarian of the NOAA Marine Mammal Laboratory Library, Seattle, Washington, who was always eager to answer our many questions and guide us through the libraries Fur-Seal Archives. Also, we are very grateful to the staff at the National Archives and Records Administration (NARA), Pacific Alaska Region, Anchorage, Alaska; especially Bruce Parham and Diana Kodiak, who brought so many records to our attention, and labored for days at the photocopier, and Bill Greathouse at the NARA repository in Seattle, Washington.

We searched many other archives and libraries both electronically and in person. We found materials in many states across the nation. We give special thanks to the following: staff of the: Smithsonian Institution Archives, Ellen Alers; Smithsonian Photographic Services, Dave Bergevin; Smithsonian's National Anthropological Archives, Vyrdis Thomas, and Susan McElrath; University of St. Andrews, Scotland, Special Collections, Norman Reid, Pam Cranston and Cilla Jackson; American National History Museum, New York City, Barbara Mathe; Kendell Institute Library, New Bedford Whaling Museum, Massachusetts, Laura Pereira, and Michael LaPides; Elmer E. Rasmuson Library, University of Alaska, Fairbanks, Rose Speranza; Alaska State Library and Archives, Mary Anne Slemmons and Heather Hadley; University of Washington Library Special Collections, Carla Rickerson and John Paul Deley; Notre Dame University Special Collection; Cleveland Museum; San Diego Historical Museum; and Bancroft Library, Berkeley, California.

We extend a special thank you to all individuals, libraries, museums, archives, universities, and historical societies, who allowed the use of photographs to accompany the text.

Numerous individuals contributed to the editing of the book including: Professor Dan Doyle of Seattle University; Robin Maberry; Karla Sclater, University of Washington; Jo Antonson, Deputy Director, Alaska Office of History; and Archaeology; and Bruce Parham, Director of the NARA–Pacific Alaska Region, Anchorage, Alaska. Bruce and Jo made very significant contributions toward the completeness and historical accuracy of this work. Photo archivist Gina Rappaport assisted with the identification of many of the illustrations herein. She also found the 1923 Edward C. Johnston glass plate negative portraits of St. George Island residents. The wooden crate containing the negatives was located in a warehouse comparable to the one depicted at the end of the Indiana Jones film Raiders of the Lost Ark. Martha Jackson prepared the numerous census tables from Pribilof Islands' Agent's Logs. Mina Jacobs translated the 1868, St. Paul Island census from Russian to English. Kristine Kalyor of Kaylor Made Designs, Seattle, did outstanding work with the initial design and layout of this book. Kristina Worthington with Genwest Systems, Edmonds, Washington, exhibited tireless and cheerful patience attending to the innumerable edits made to the initial layout. Our thanks are also offered to Kristina for taking this project forward to publication through the Government Printing Office.

The support indirectly provided by Alaska's Senator Ted Stevens and Congressman Don Young, who recognized the government's responsibility to the Pribilof Aleut people who gave so much to support their country during the commercial fur-seal harvest and World War II, contributed immensely towards the publication of this book. Also, John Rayfield, Republican Staff Director, Subcommittee on Coast Guard and Maritime Transportation, worked tirelessly to ensure the reality of the environmental restoration work, the transfer of federal property to the Pribilof people, and NOAA's ability to complete its obligations under the National Historic Preservation Act.

Numerous individuals within NOAA also encouraged the publication of this book. Special thanks and gratitude are extended to Craig O'Connor, Robert Taylor, of the NOAA Office of General Counsel, and Jack Dunnigan, Bill Corso, Deb Larson Salvatore, David Kennedy, Ellen Clark, David Westerholm, Brian Julius, Aneesah Whaley, and Thomas Cox of the National Ocean Service for their encouragement and support. Our apologies go to all those other important individuals who we failed to mention, but to whom we extend our sincerest appreciation and gratitude.

PREFACE

European culture is engulfing and destroying the native peoples left in the world. Their customs and habits, legends and memories, weapons and artifacts are rapidly disappearing and there will soon be new and different developments in a large part of the human race. The oral history of these people will be lost and scientific knowledge in philosophy, medicine, and natural history will suffer from it.

Mankind must therefore make every effort to collect, as the most valuable knowledge of the ancient past, all the objects pertaining to the development of culture, for they are documents for the future writing of the “Book of Mankind.”

[Johan Adrian Jacobsen. Alaskan Voyage 1881-1883. An Expedition to the Northwest Coast of America. Trans. Erna Gunther from the German text of Adrian Woldt. The Univ. of Chicago Press. Chicago, 1977, ix.]

IT SEEMS INCREDIBLE THAT A TREELESS, FIVE-ISLAND ARCHIPELAGO with a total area of about seventy-eight square miles, situated in the environmentally hostile Bering Sea, would be the site of some of the most significant political, economic, and social events in the United States and Alaska history. These Pribilof Islands, nearly 300 miles from the Alaska mainland, are the breeding grounds for the northern fur seal, whose valuable pelts perpetuated the “fur rush” that is largely lost to the annals of the nineteenth-century gold rush and the twentieth-century oil rush. Prior to the 1898 gold strike in the Alaska Territory, marine mammal hides—first the sea otter, and then the fur seal—represented the first great economic boom in the new territory.

On July 27, 1868, shortly after the 1867 purchase of the Alaska Territory, the U.S. government set aside the Pribilof Islands (also called the Seal Islands) as a “special reservation” administered by the Secretary of the Treasury for the protection of the fur seals. As a reservation, only resident Aleut (al-ee-ute) natives, and government personnel and contractors had access to the islands. For more than a century the government controlled and/or administered an industrial monopoly of the fur-seal industry. The Aleut residents served as the primary labor force on the islands, and the government unwittingly denied them many of their civil liberties. Only government approval allowed anyone to go ashore or leave the islands.

The history of the Seal Islands illustrates the far-reaching influence of these tiny volcanic islands. The U.S. government’s administration of the islands created a myriad of documents, maps, photographs, and books that provide the foundation for late-nineteenth-century U.S. history. Conservation concerns drove the government to invest in ongoing scientific studies of the fur-seal population and the natural history of these remote islands. The fur-seal industry also enriched private business men, one of whom later put his earnings into the creation of the California vineyard, Inglenook. In the 1970s, Inglenook became the Niebaum-Coppola Winery, and subsequently Rubicon, owned by film producer and director Francis Ford Coppola, and his wife, Eleanor.

Following a string of federal bureaucracies, the National Oceanic Atmospheric Administration, NOAA (in the U.S. Dept. of Commerce) took over administration of the Pribilof Islands in 1970. After nearly a century of complete government control, the government acknowledged Pribilof Islands' Aleuts as rightful owners of their traditional lands. The transfer of public lands to the Aleuts took place through several federal acts and agreements, such as The Fur Seal Act of 1966 (Public Law 89-702) and its 1983 amendment; the Alaska Native Claims Settlement Act of 1971; and the Transfer of Property Agreement of 1984. Sections of both islands fall within the Seal Islands National Historic Landmark, created in 1966 under the National Historic Preservation Act of 1966.

The transfer of lands from federal to private entities progressed slowly. In the summer of 1989, the State of Alaska's Department of Environmental Conservation (DEC) issued a Notice of Violation against NOAA for an oil sheen release along a shoreline at St. Paul Island. This incident sparked concerns by St. Paul Aleuts who wanted NOAA to address other potential environmental-quality issues. Leaders at St. George Island expressed similar concerns, although all appropriate former federal property had already been transferred to them.

Responding to these concerns in 1992, the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency (EPA) launched a preliminary investigation at each island. Under the Comprehensive Environmental Response, Compensation, and Liability Act (CERCLA), popularly known as Superfund, and the Resource Conservation and Recovery Act (RCRA), the government assessed potential contamination and liability. In 1994, the EPA issued its determination that no contamination posed an unacceptable risk to human health or the environment under CERCLA or RCRA.

Aleut leaders on the Seal Islands continued to charge the United States government with environmental quality violations despite the EPA's determination. NOAA, acknowledging a basis in fact regarding contamination, entered into a Two-Party Agreement (TPA) with the State of Alaska on January 26, 1996. The TPA coincided with a congressional mandate, Public Law 104-91, signed by President Clinton earlier in the month. Section 3(c) of the law, titled, "Resolution of Federal Responsibilities," required the Secretary of Commerce to clean up contaminants, primarily petroleum, landfills, and miscellaneous debris on properties that the government occupied during its operations of the commercial fur-seal industry.

NOAA directed its Chief of the Office of Response and Restoration, David Kennedy, to address environmental restoration on the Seal Islands. Kennedy appointed John Lindsay to manage the restoration efforts. The environmental cleanup required extensive research into the history of petroleum contamination, infrastructure development, industrial debris, and solid waste landfills on the islands. Both the cleanup and the transfer of lands also demanded compliance with Section 106 of the National Historic Preservation Act of 1966, to determine if cleaning up the contamination would adversely impact any historic properties. NOAA then contracted with Betty Lindsay, a genealogist and researcher, to investigate and compile historical records pertaining to the history of contamination on the Pribilof Islands.

Betty Lindsay's research uncovered volumes of documents on the science and management of the northern fur seal, and numerous sources concerned with Aleut civil rights abuses. Much of the material overshadowed the Aleuts' heritage and the individual sacrifices contributing to the history of the islands' fur-seal industry. Census records kept by U.S. federal agents assigned to the islands, however, set Betty Lindsay on an independent eight-year investigative project conducting genealogical research that took her to national and international archival collections (including some via the internet) and ultimately shaped the format of this book.

The available sources for this book largely came from government documents or "headquarters history" as opposed to material generated by Aleuts, or other non-governmental sources, what anthropologist William S. Laughlin termed "grassroots history."¹ This fact created research challenges. For example, the popular practice of identifying government officials in documents only by their initials, and the frequent failure to identify Aleuts in written documents as well as photographs proved frustrating. Creative research techniques and diligence brought success in identifying many people "lost" in anonymity in the documents.

The genealogies and censuses presented here span from the United States purchase of Alaska in 1867 to 1929, and approximates the seventy-two year limit on public access to census records. This book helps illuminate the Unaajin, or Aleut, history of the Pribilof Islands. The Pribilovians have an outstanding heritage upon which they can build and guide their own lives for a better tomorrow. We hope this work will serve them well as they continue to make history.

— INTRODUCTION —

Outline of Census Years

This book addresses the people of St. George Island and St. Paul Island, Pribilof Islands, Alaska. The vital statistics for births, marriages, and deaths for the residents of these islands were acquired from the islands' agent logs, annual island censuses (when taken from 1868–1929), agent annual reports that included census information, and Alaska federal census reports from 1900–1930. When additional information was written in the agent's log about an individual such as the date of death, it was included herein.

The government agent on each island served as the record keeper of vital events. The "Agent's Log Book," also occasionally referred to as the "Official Journal," functioned as the official record and primary source of information about births, marriages, and deaths of the Pribilof Islands' people. These logbooks and journals were compiled by government agents on both islands from 1870 to 1961. Collectively, they are known as the Pribilof Islands' Logbooks. Each island had its own log with entries typically made on a daily basis until 1962. At that time, the daily log was replaced by a monthly report and each island's City Government Records. The Russian Orthodox Church on each island also kept records written in Russian of vital events.

The spelling of surnames is a historical study in itself, whether focused on the Pribilof Islands' natives or any other ethnic group in American society. In 1916, however, an official communiqué from the United States Secretary of Commerce at Washington, DC, directed the standardization of the given names and surnames of the islands' native inhabitants retroactively to 1914. A uniform spelling was created using a phonetic system worked out between the Russian priest, government agent, and island resident families. Each island family from that point on adopted the name spelling that largely remains in use today. The census records included at the end of this chapter enable interested readers to follow the variation of name spellings from 1871 to the 1914 standardization.

Agents on the Pribilof Islands took two basic types of census schedules: one of seals at each of the rookeries and the other of the people on the two inhabited islands. While the seal census, like the human census, had a rough beginning, they both became routine and provided scientifically reliable population data through the present day.

The human census suffered primarily by its weak naming conventions for the first four decades. We have located within various government documents the human inhabitant census records beginning with 1868. The census records herein include the following years for each respective island:

A. Census of inhabitants on St. George Island, illustrated

1871; 1877–1895; 1897–1899; 1900; 1902; 1904–1905; 1907–1908; 1914; 1920; 1922

B. Census of inhabitants on St. Paul Island, illustrated

1868; 1870–1875; 1887; 1890; 1892–1895; 1900; 1902; 1904–1929

The annual census records for St. George and St. Paul Islands, respectively, covering the years 1868–1929 appear in the Pribilof Islands Logbooks, 1870–1961, that are available at the National Archives and Records Administration–Pacific Alaska Region, located in Anchorage, Alaska. Census records were published randomly in various government documents. These records are reproduced herein, and the published source is acknowledged with each. Federal population schedules for the Alaska Territory cover 1900–1930 and include the Pribilof Islands. The census schedules are publicly available from the National Archives and Records Administration (NARA) through regional archives located in major cities throughout the country and in the Washington, DC area, interlibrary loan through libraries that may own a copy, and digitally through fee-for-subscription services such as Ancestry.com and Heritage Quest. The population schedules are statutorily sequestered for 72 years after the census is taken to protect the privacy of the individuals enumerated in them.

Standardization of the native population names on the Pribilof Islands challenged the non-Aleut and non-Russian speaking agents responsible for keeping such records. The British encountered similar difficulties when they asserted authority over the French in eastern North America, and it was commonly encountered when non-English speaking European immigrants entered the United States at Ellis Island, New York and other points of entry. So for four decades, the majority of Aleut names lacked uniformity within the government records. As noted above, in 1916, an official directive from the Department of Commerce Bureau of Fisheries commanded that uniform spellings be decided by the islands' residents.

Details regarding the impact of three disease epidemics on the St. Paul Island population occurring during 1882, 1890, and 1900 also are included in this book.

STANDARDIZATION OF PRIBILOF ISLANDS' NATIVES' NAMES¹

St. Paul Census Special Enrollment, November 1, 1916

Memorandum of explanation:

Because of the confusion in the spelling of the names of natives, not only as contained in the various official records of the station, but also among the people themselves, and because of the expressed wish of the Bureau of Fisheries, in its letter dated August 9, 1916, which states: "The office desires that in connection with all official matters the names of natives of the Pribilofs shall be written with precision, and that they shall not be varied from time to time through individual caprice," an effort has been made to standardize the spelling of these names.

The acting priest of the local Russian church, which institution maintains a carefully written record of all its members, produced the parish register and transliterated from Russian into English the names of all the native persons present on St. Paul Island on the date upon which the work was undertaken, viz: November 1, 1916. As a check in transliteration the language key published in the back of the Standard Dictionary (Funk & Wagnall Company, New York, 1904) was painstakingly employed.

Sheets were then prepared with the names of the various members of each family set forth, after which the adults were called in and questioned as to what they might know regarding the correct spellings of their respective family names, and as to any preference they might have regarding the forms of the given names-whether they preferred to retain the exact Russian form or to adopt permanently an English equivalent.

In the case of family names terminating in Russian in "ev," which is pronounced, in English "off," and "ov," which has the sound of "off," it was left to the natives to decide which they would adopt. Except in the case of the Melovidov family, which has long used the Russian ending, no others wished to use v as the terminal letter. Until a few years ago, when someone arbitrarily decided that a single terminal f was invariable on St. Paul Island, and all expressed a desire to resume the use of that form. It was accordingly adopted.

On August 24, 1916, the necessary papers having been granted by competent authority to a number of natives who wished to adopt the children of others, and all having expressed a desire to give the adopted children their own family names, the changes requested have been authorized tentatively, pending the issuance of papers by the proper courts. In such cases the children have been directed to retain their original family names as middle names, with the idea of thus preserving a record of their lineage. The present enrollment shows these changes.

When the spelling of the names was finally settled upon, new sheets were filled out with the family name and the proper given name of each member thereof, and these sheets were then signed, in the presence of the Agent, the senior schoolteacher, and the acting Priest of the Russian church, by each member of the family. Those persons unable to write their names,

Current lore has it that the spelling of Pribilovian names became standardized after Reeve Aleutian Airways began dropping mail in 1949 at the islands. “In April 1949, biweekly airmail service was established between the mainland and St. Paul Island.”² Subsequently, “...airmail drop service was initiated on St. George Island on January 6, 1952, and during the year 23 mail drops were made near the village of St. George.”³ The story goes that because extended families living on both islands would receive each others’ mail, a better system was needed. The following editorial posted in Alaska Magazine recounted one version:

As we lifted off from the new runway, Jack Mercurief, who grew up in St. George, leaned across the aisle and introduced himself. “People call me Crazy Jack,” he said with a smile. “Mercurief, with one F. That’s how you can tell which island I’m from. The St. Paul Mercurieffs spell it with two Fs. Do you know why?”

I didn’t. So, as we passed between the lesser Pribilof islands, Walrus and Otter, on the way to St. Paul, he explained. When Jack was young, Reeve Aleutian Airways delivered the mail by flying low over the islands and dropping mailbags out the door. With a few extended families constituting most of the population of the two islands, letters and packages frequently reached the wrong destination because often people on different islands shared the same name. To solve the problem, the mail carriers decided to differentiate the islands by spelling their inhabitants’ names differently. Mercurieff remained Mercurieff on St. Paul, but became Mercurief on St. George. The Stepanofs, Lestenkofs and Philemonofs got similar treatment, and it stuck.⁴

Since surnames are typically linked with marriages, the following observations of courtship and marriage made by journalist George Wardman during 1879 may be of some benefit to the reader. The text is transcribed from Mr. Wardman's A Trip To Alaska (1884, 213–220). Following his Alaskan adventure, Mr. Wardman became Assistant Treasury Agent at St. George Island during the years of 1881–1885.

ALEUT COURTSHIP AND MARRIAGE

BY GEORGE WARDMAN

On the 30th of July the steamer "St. Paul" sailed out of the fog surrounding the island which bears the same name as herself, having on board a cargo valued at more than a million dollars, for San Francisco. In addition to the seal-skins, she had in her hold last winter's take of land furs for the Alaska Commercial Company from the Yukon district. The latter, along with a hundred barrels of seal meat and a large quantity of oil, were discharged at Onalaska, where we arrived on the 1st of August, having been fog-bound outside for half a day. Every year the company brings down a large amount of seal meat, which is distributed gratuitously among the Onalaska people, along with seal oil, which is almost indispensable among these people for food. The oil is a real luxury, and is used liberally, when available, to soften their dried fish. When the large casks, containing two hundred and fifty gallons of oil each, were rolled up the wharf here, to be pumped into barrels for distribution, the tricklings from the pump were scooped up on Aleut fingers and sipped into Aleut mouths, as the gamins on wharves in the East suck the syrup that leaks from barrels of saccharine sweets. But seal meat and oil were not the only important shipments by the steamer "St. Paul" from the seal islands to Onalaska. There came down twenty Onalaska men who had been taken up last spring as laborers, and as Onalaska Aleuts are not so rich as those of the seal islands, their return with their earnings made quite an important event for the community. Yet this was not all that contributed to the importance of the occasion. The steamer brought down four young men from St. George's, and five from St. Paul's, looking for wives. It should be known that the fur-seal islanders are the crème de la crème of Aleut society. They earn more money and live better than any other Aleuts, and naturally they become fascinating fellows as soon as they land among the maidens of Onalaska.

Of course there are young women who desire to marry on the fur-seal islands, but the church will not permit marriages within the degree of third-cousin consanguinity, and, what makes the matter more oppressive, a relationship equally annoying is manufactured at the baptismal font. An Aleut may not marry the son or daughter, nor niece, nor nephew, nor any relation within the seventy degree of his or her godfather or godmother. This is the solemn truth, and although people ought to be glad to have relations, when they are rich, there is such a thing as having too many when they are poor. There is now on St. George's a marriageable young woman, unexceptional from an Aleut point of view, who is so related by ties of consanguinity with what we would call remote cousins, and so bewilderingly connected by baptism with godfathers and godmothers and their relations, that she cannot marry upon the island, although there are plenty of young men there who need wives, and who would like to have her. She got her temper up about it, and said she would never marry off the island, which is a noble sort of self-sacrifice highly worthy of admiration. When the seal islanders come down to Onalaska they lay siege to all the marriageable women in the settlement, and marriages begin at once. Those who cannot get wives here-and some such cases are reported-ask the Company to furnish them free transportation "out West" to Atka, three hundred miles away. At the same time there is a surplus of female population on the fur-seal islands who won't marry anybody but a fur-sealer, because they have been brought up in an aristocratic way in frame cottages, and provided with wardrobes which enable them to change dresses seven times a day. Such are the advantages and disadvantages of female education among the fur-sealers.

There is not much of the spooney business in Aleut courtship. The steamer landed the wife-hunting seal-skinners on Friday. On Saturday one of them was asked, "Are you married yet?" "Not yet, but I shall be tomorrow." "Who are you going to marry?" "I don't know yet."

On Sunday, two days after the arrival of the wife hunters, three of them were married, two couples at one time and one at another. The three couples would have been executed together but there were only four crowns among the church properties. Crowns and candles are indispensable at these weddings. When marrying a couple, the priest appears in full vestments, with the tall, slightly tapering coffee-pot-shaped velvet hat; and a choir of male voices chant nasal responses to the long service read by his reverence. The couples to be married are stood up in a row, the first step being to place a lighted candle, decorated with a crimson bow, in each hand. Then the reading commences, and continues till the priest shows signs of fatigue, when the attendant brings out blessed rings on a blessed tray, and each one puts on his or her ring, taken at random from the tray, man and woman being treated alike in this respect. After the rings there is more reading, with responses from the nasal choir; and when the priest becomes exhausted again the blessed crowns are brought out. On this occasion there were four crowns,-two which were old and lusterless, and two which were not only new, but brilliant with rubies, emeralds, and diamonds, or what looked like them, and answered every purpose just as well. There stood the two couples, like the kings and queens of a chessboard, with crowns upon heads which did not fit them.

Of the two couples in this case one bride of a Russian appearance, was dressed in a light silk with a purple stripe; she had a blue bow at her throat, and a pink sash around her waist. Her hair had been braided damp over night, and hung in waves down her shoulders. Her eyes were downcast constantly during the ceremony, and her nose, long and straight, pointed sharply toward the floor in an ominous manner. She wore a cynical sort of smile, like that of an experienced circuit preacher when he knows that the other brother is getting nothing the better of him in the pending horse-trade. The crown which the groom of this couple wore was much too small for him, being a great, large-headed fellow with a thick neck, high cheek bones, and a twenty-pound fist, so that when he should have bowed he dared not, knowing that if he attempted it his crown would tumble to the floor. On the other hand the bride's crown was altogether too large for her, and, wearing her abundant hair down her back on that day only gave the crown a greater chance to settle. If she had worn it in a coil on the back of her head, or in a braid clubbed up behind, or in a pad on top à la pompadour, or en chignon, or Watteau, or in any of the thousand and one styles known to modern capillary engineering, the crown might have been stayed in some sort of a genteel position. But it settled down too far at first and every time she bowed in response to the words read by the priest, and every time she nodded in reply to the questions, if she would obey, &c., with the hardly-ever smile upon her resigned face, the crown sunk lower and lower till it got down over her ears; and when the priest led the couple, hand in hand, three times around the little stand that served as an altar [sic] on this occasion, she looked like the most abandoned creature in the world, and as if she did not care who knew it. Of course the effect was all due to the crown coming down over her ears and to the Mephistophelean smile upon her countenance, which deepened as the crown descended, but it was enough to scare all thought of marrying in Onalaska out of the head of any reflecting man.

The other bride was a Japanese-looking Aleut, black hair, narrow, slanting eyes, and in person short and stout. She wore a gingham dress, and was not only very plain, but evidently not a person of high standing in society, in consequence of which she attracted little attention, but she was married as much as any of them. The third couple were joined similarly soon after, and next day the three seal-skinners paid five dollars each for the candles which had lighted them into the promising state of matrimony.

About the nicest-looking lot of Aleut women we saw on this cruise in Alaska were at Kyska for the summer, belonging, when at home, in Atka, and being at the time away with the otter hunters; and if the St. Paul and St. George fellows, could get among them, no doubt they would marry and return home with wives that would breed the most delightful jealousies and discords among the matrons of the fur-seal islands, who are very proud, considering themselves the élite of Alaska society, but who are not all so good-looking as those of Atka; and that fact would place them at a decided disadvantage in the men's opinion, for a great many of these fellows appear to be sufficiently civilized to prefer beauty to brains in a wife.

AN OVERVIEW OF ST. GEORGE ISLAND INHABITANTS, 1870 TO 1913

- Census Data for the Overview came from several sources, including: the 1877–1880 census records for St. George Island found on pages 284–417 of the St. Paul Island Agent’s Log for the years 1896–1900; and, the St. George Island Agent’s Log for the period 1870–1877.⁵ For the complete census records see the Census Schedule Section within Vol. II.
 - The House number given in parenthesis identifies the occupant family in the 1877 census. The individual name in brackets identifies the head of household of the occupant family residing in the house during the July 17, 1913, census taken by Henry W. Elliott and Andrew F. Gallagher.⁶

HEALTH EPIDEMICS AT ST. PAUL ISLAND 1882, 1890, AND 1900

Living on a remote island during the nineteenth century proved challenging for the natives of St. Paul Island. Epidemics in 1882, 1890, and 1900 significantly reduced the population in a span of one or two months. Diseases such as pneumonia, influenza, and measles took their toll in deaths as recorded in the government agent logs for the respective years. Unfortunately, Agent Jacob Moulton neglected to identify all individuals by name when he recorded the deaths in 1882.

1882¹⁰

April 28, 1882

“ACC schooner Mathew Turner arrived from Unalaska, Captain Anderson reports 15 deaths at Unalaska within the past 2 weeks.”

Two weeks following the arrival of the Mathew Turner from Unalaska, the following thirty people died, and many from pneumonia; most deaths occurred during the month of May. The following list is presented as found written in the agent’s log.

May 16	Lukehian Panoloff and the wife of Agaka Golkin died today
May 19	One death yesterday and one today, both small children
May 20	Timophay Evanoff and two infant children died today
May 21	Four natives died today, two adult males and two children
May 22	Two old men died today
May 23	Two deaths today, one small child and one old man
May 24	One death today Alexander Pankoff , aged 42 years
May 25	Antone Shutyagin age 46 years
May 26	Philip Sedick , age 30 years
May 27	Wife of Philat Tetoff , aged 42
May 28	Stephan Belloglozoff , age 42 years, conception
May 30	Lomeneka Bodamova , age 44, phemonia [sic passim]
June 2	One child died yesterday of marasmus; one today pneumonia
June 6	Wife of Jacob Kotchutin , pneumonia, age 25
June 7	John Mandlegin , pneumonia, age 46 years
June 10	Widow Meczekin , pneumonia, age 38
June 11	Stephan Kozenoff , phemonia
August 16	Benedict Boloskin , age 30; 20 mo. old child of Mr. & Mrs. John Fratis
August 19	Michael Krukoff son of Nicholi Krukoff

1890 INFLUENZA EPIDEMIC ON ST. PAUL ISLAND

October of 1890 was a month that brought influenza and death to St. Paul Island. Every household came down with the disease. Seven people died before the influenza epidemic came to an end. Agent Col. Joseph Murray kept an account of the tragedy in his official log. The following transcription taken from Agent Murray's log covers the period of October 8th to October 31, 1890.¹¹

Wednesday, Oct 8, 1890

About one half of the natives are sick, the doctor has been kept very busy all day and all last night. I have closed the school for the present because the majority of the children are sick, and so is Mr. Baldwin the teacher.

Thursday, Oct 9, 1890

The disease known as "La Grippe" has taken possession of our people, and I fear some of them must die. There is a scarcity of nurses—hardly enough to [sic] about half attend the sick. The weather is bad too, raining and blowing hard and constantly for three days now. Dr. Lutz is working like a hero, and my fear now is that he himself may be stricken down. He requested me to do all in my power to induce those who are well to keep within doors and expose themselves as little as possible—and acting on his suggestion, I have requested the Priest to hold no more evening services in the church until the sickness subsides. And he has very willingly complied with my request, and sent word around to the people to keep within doors during the sickness.

Friday, October 10, 1890

Every house in town has its sick and the doctor is kept very busy night and day.

Saturday, October 12, 1890

I have only one Man, Jim Crow, to send to guard N.E. P. [North East Point] The sea is rough at S.W. Bay.

Sunday, October 12, 1890

The "Bear" anchored here last night from St. George, and this morning I went on board to take off our people who had been visiting St. George. I had hard work to find enough healthy men to handle the boat over to the ship. While none of our people have died, the sick do not seem to recover as rapidly as we expected they would. No Church service today, and the School must remain closed for another week at least. When the "Bear" leaves us next time she will go to San Francisco, so we are all busy with our last letters to friends and families at home, for until May, we cannot receive nor send another letter. Eoff Philamonoff of St. George who was to marry widow Arkashoff of St. Paul, has not come over because Mr. Lavender could not let him leave St. George because of the scarcity of men there.

11 St. Paul Is. Agent's Log. 1890. pp. 287–300.

Monday, October 13, 1890

The "Bear" left us very early this morning or during the night. Sickness has the majority of the people down and many of them are very bad. Dr. Lutz is working incessantly and he still hopes he can bring them through without having more than one or two deaths. Antone Melevidoff and wife are very sick and fears are entertained that the woman must die. As soon as the men who were visiting St. George returned they were all taken sick.

Tuesday, October 14, 1890

Today there are no new cases of sickness and the prospects are favorable for all those who are sick. The School is still closed, and it was a great effort on the part of the few men who are able to be out of bed to get in some seals and kill enough for food. I accompanied four natives to Middle Hill [Polovina] and assisted them to make the drive and we killed 114 – and Mr. Redpath very kindly let us have a team and wagon to haul the meat to the village. Alex Hansen had charge of the killing, skinning and hauling, and he did everything in a first class manner, and was courteous and kind to everyone. The weather, which has been rough and cold and disagreeable for the past week, is now beginning to settle down and grow warmer. If it continues so, I have hopes of the speedy recovery of our poor people. A Brigantine passed here today going South-supposed to be a Whaler. No schooners in sight for which I am very thankful for I have but few men able to stand guard.

Wednesday, October 15, 1890

There is not any improvement in those who are sick, and the doctor fears there will be some deaths. Occasionally there is a man who feels better for a day or two, but he is taken down again worse than before. They nearly all complain of pain in the ears and several of them have a running from the ears.

Thursday, October 16, 1890

There is not one native man in the Village today who is in real good health. A few are up and around, but in justice to themselves they ought to be in bed. A few of the very sick are on the mend. I called upon Karp Buterin today and found him able to be up and very much improved.

Friday, October 17, 1890

More new cases of sickness reported today, and a turn for the worse in many old cases. Dr. Lutz reported to me the case of Mrs. Pohomoff (widow) who was alone and sick, and without any fire; I brought her 75# of coal and had a fire made for her, and she shall have food from the kitchen till she gets well. The Dr. also reported widow Peeshivemkoff out of coal, and I brought her 75#.

Saturday, October 18, 1890

Steam whaler, "Narwhal," Capt. McGregor, came to East Landing today, and the First Officer, Mr. Dexter, came ashore and offered to take letters, packages or messages of all sorts to San Francisco. He reported a very good season for whaling in the Arctic, but also the misfortune of losing four men overboard during a storm as the vessel was on her way out. I forwarded a letter to Mr. Goff telling him of the sickness here and Doctor Lutz wrote to the N.A.C.Co. for additional medicines for next year. Widow Pohomoff died today of pneumonia. Several cases of sickness in addition to those already reported.

Sunday, October 19, 1890

This is a gloomy day-we have no Church service today for the reason that the Priest as well as the majority of the people is lying sick. The Doctor advises and insists that the School be kept closed till the present sickness subsides somewhat and I shall keep it closed until he tells me the danger is over.

Before Mr. Tingle left this island last August he ordered that the following shall constitute a widows weekly allowance: three candles, one bar soap, four pounds soda crackers, two pounds assorted sweet crackers, half pound tea. And now I find that a widow with children to support is allowed no more than a lone widow and I have protested against it. Mr. Redpath, who is Agent here for the N.A.C.Co., and who is a thorough gentleman, and a humane man too; tells me that his orders are to give to each widow the above allowance and he suggests to me that until the present widows fund has been exhausted he cannot give any more; but when the widows fund is spent he will take measures to prevent any widow or orphan suffering from hunger. Now, Mr. Goff's instructions to me was to keep the widow's fund for the purpose of buying clothing for those who were most in need. Under the circumstances I will spend the money for food for those who are hungry. I cannot bear to see children starving.

Monday, October 20, 1890

Rainy, dark and gloomy enough. On Saturday I sent three men to N.E.P. [North East Point] to guard the rookery and yesterday I had to send a team and wagon to bring one of them back sick. Today I ordered another of them to come home and attend to his family who have been stricken with sickness since he left. I have issued coal today to all the people. Only four men (natives) are well enough to work and they distributed the coal to all. Mr. Redpath very kindly let me have a team and wagon to deliver the coal to the people. The outlook is gloomy in the extreme-but it will not do to say so to the poor fellows who are sick; on the contrary I shall aim to cheer them all I can. If I saw a few men recover their good health I would be more hopeful, but recovery comes very slowly. Dr. Lutz is attentive and he is doing everything he possible can do and he is on his feet night and day.

Tuesday, October 21, 1890

Only four native men reported well today-and I could not kill seals for food because I did not think it right to send the few men out in the rain. The watchmen at S.W. Bay came home last night and this morning one of them is sick. George Buterin and Eupheme Koshevonikoff died today. Several others are not expected to live. I ordered crackers and tea for Catherine Shane-widow and four children & grandchildren, to be charged to Widow Fund.

Wednesday, October 22, 1890

Yustema Mandregin died today. By a great effort I found four men able to go out to Middle Hill and make a drive of seals for food. Alex Hansen rendered valuable assistance in killing seals, and distributing the meat among those who were not able to fetch it home for themselves. We killed 95:

the skins were all stagy. This afternoon we were surprised to see the "Bear" come to the island, she is now at anchor, but as the sea is too rough for a small boat we have had no communication yet. Mrs. Antone Melevidoff is not expected to live through the night-and it is with deep regret I write the news, for there is not a better woman, wife or mother on the island. Feocla Shane has volunteered to give her oldest child to Mrs. Vladmier Prokolief-and the latter is willing to take the child-and, as it will be a decided advantage to the child, I have consented to the transfer.

Thursday, October 23, 1890

Signaled the "Bear" "All sick" "Send a boat." Capt. Healey [sic] sent a boat and I went on board the "Bear," and found that a vessel had been chartered by the government and sent up here to guard the seals on the islands. Whoever reported that I had allowed marauders to land on St. Paul must have been very much mistaken indeed. Capt. Healy very properly sent the "Bertha" back to San Francisco. George Buterin, Yustema Mandrigin and Eupheme Koshivenikoff were buried today. There has been no change in the condition of the sick.

Friday, October 24, 1890

The "Bear" sailed for St. George and took John Fratis and his family to St. George where he goes to cook for the N.A.C.Co. the regular cook having left and gone to San Francisco. A daughter was born to Alex Galktonief. A Bark was sighted to the westward and a Steam Whaler passed N.E. Point going towards Oounalaska. Karp Buterin is up and is fairly well again, and so is Daniel Parauchin and John Kotchooten. Aggie Kushen, Mary Kushen, Jake Kotchooten and several others are able to be up-but there are none of them able to work. George Kotchooten and Mrs. Antone Melevidoff are so badly sick that the doctor has no hopes of saving them.

Saturday, October 25, 1890

Mrs. Antone Melevidoff died today. There is a decided improvement in those who have been complaining, so much so that I found six men today who were able to go to guard the rookeries. Nicoli Krukoff, Stephan Kozerooff and Neon Tetoff were sent to S. W. Bay; Peter Krukoff, John Kotchooten and Dorofay Stepetin were sent to N.E. Point. Dr. Lutz made a report on the condition of the people during the present epidemic, which I shall forward to the Department at Washington. I will copy his report on the following pages of this journal.

Sunday, October 26, 1890

George Kotchooten died today. The "Bear" came over from St. George and Capt. Healy sent me word that he thought he saw a Schooner over there last night sailing toward St. Paul, and he immediately came over to warn me of the danger. He also offered to put men ashore to guard the rookeries, but I declined the offer because I consider I have enough healthy men now to do all the guard duty that is necessary. No vessel except the "Bear" has been sighted today in any direction, and it is now after sun down. The following is Dr. Lutz's Report on the Epidemic and the present condition of the people.

Oct. 25th 1890

Hon. Joseph Murray, Treasury Agent

Dear Sir:

On account of the prevalence here since Sept 28th, of an epidemic influenza of great severity, followed in many instances by grave sequelae I urgently recommended on the 8th of October, the closing of the School. It seemed to me expedient and wise also that the church services should not be prolonged and that they should be as infrequent as possible during the existence here of the present distressing and dangerous malady. Since Oct. 8th the school as above referred to you for your promptitude on the occasion and for this and numerous other instances in which you so cheerfully and willingly assisted and befriended me, I tender you my most hearty thanks.

I think the priest is deserving of our thanks for so cheerfully and promptly contributing his share towards allaying any alarm by acting on your suggestion not to ring the church bells at funerals and in shortening and refraining from holding church services as much as possible.

The first case of the disease occurred on the 28th of September, being a woman who had just returned per steamer "Bear" from a visit to Oounalaska. [Mrs. Panonchin & Apollon Bourdukofsky arrived the 28th] Her symptoms began with those of an ordinary cold. Very rapidly they assumed a more alarming character accompanied with peculiar sensations of an uncomfortable nature about the region of the ears, some sore throat, hoarse voice, intense head-ache, bleeding at the nose, pains in the limbs and between the shoulder blades and a copious frothy expectoration. Prostration was very great, pulse exceedingly rapid and fever very high. For a time it was feared she would die, but under the use of appropriate remedies, as indicated by symptoms with milk and good food, tonics and stimulants, she finally, though rather slowly, recovered. Shortly after this, several other cases of the same kind occurred among them being the husband of the woman just referred to. His epistaxis or bleeding at the nose was long continued and immoderate, his convalescence slow and uncertain. Indeed, even at the present date, it is not considered to allow him to leave the village as a watchman for the rookeries.

On the 7th of October I visited thirty five patients on the 8th-46. Thereafter, I was kept so busy as to be unable to keep an accurate list of the new cases. Among the more noteworthy symptoms may be mentioned a series of peculiar uncomfortable symptoms about and in front of the ears and below the jaws, followed by temporary deafness in a number of instances and in others by inflammation of the middle ear accompanied by purulent discharge. Bleeding from the nose was a very prominent symptom and occurred in nearly half the cases. Very dark red color of the urine was present in all the fatal and in many of the worst cases. Among those who bled most profusely from the nose were Daniel Paranchun and Karp Buterins little son Constantine. The latter had characteristic though mild symptoms with the exception of the epistaxis which was obstinate to ordinary remedies and finally necessitates the plugging up of his nostrils with cotton.

In these cases the internal administration of gallic acid and ergotine seemed to be of service. One case, Mrs. Peter Peshuikoff, had characteristic symptoms accompanied with coughing up of pure bright red unmixed blood. The most serious sequence was pneumonia. The first death was that of Barbara Pohomoff on Oct. 18th of double pneumonia. I personally administered to her quinine in large doses in licorice together with wine and whiskey. Her condition changed rapidly and suddenly for the worst with very rapid pulse, quick, short respiration, high fever, total loss of appetite, with pains to the ears and eyes and intense head-ache. I ordered supplies of sugar and food for her from the house, which were promptly furnished and reported to the Treasury Agent the lack of warmth and coal in her house which he immediately remedied.

The next case of death was that of Eupheme Kozhevnikoff of the 21st followed by that of George Buterin on the same day and Yustemia Mandregin on the 22nd, all of pneumonia. Other sequels of the disease were bronchitis, in only a very small number of cases, kidney derangements, excessive nervous prostration and in one case meningitis. The latter occurred in the case of Mrs. Antone Melevidoff who at this date is not expected to recover-despite active measures and careful nursing. The most marked instance of nervous prostration was (and of course yet is-as these cases, recover with extreme slowness and difficulty) Alexandra Nedarazoff.

The treatment has consisted mainly in the use of cardiac and vascular sedative as veratrum viride, acouite and gelsemium in the beginning only followed by quinine, digitalis, whiskey, wine and ammonia. In some instances a calomel purge was given in the beginning with advantage. Blisters and cupping served of little use. The most useful remedies appeared to be veratrum viride at the beginning and digitalis later.

I have not endeavored to give a complete and detailed account of the epidemic, but rather a general view of some of the main features of the disease as it has existed here. I may add that at present date, quite a number are making a very poor uncertain and difficult convalescence. George Kotchooten is dangerously ill with pneumonia. Mrs. Peter Oustigoff is very sick with the same disease-as is Alexandra Nedarazoff; and Mrs. Antone Melevidoff is likely to die.

On the whole, I think it may be said the disease has about spent itself; and the probabilities are that the restriction in regard to keeping school may be safely lifted next Monday week.

Very truly and respectfully yours,

C. A. Lutz, MD

P.S. Since the above was written, Antone Melevidoff has reported the sad news of his wife's death. C. A. L.

Monday, October 27, 1890

Nothing new to record, except a very perceptible change for the better in the majority of those who are sick. A few of the natives reported having heard a noise during Sunday night or early this morning, resembling the sound of distant cannon shots, but today we cannot find a sign of anything new or strange and the watchmen at N.E.P. and at S. W. Bay report all well.

Tuesday, October 28, 1890

Mrs. Antone Melevidoff and George Kotchooten were buried today the whole population being present and participating in the ceremony. All well on the rookeries and no schooners in sight. The sick are all on the mend.

Wednesday, Oct 29, 1890

Made a drive of seals for food today from Middle Hill and killed 134 of which 23 were good and accepted. No new cases of sickness but on the contrary the sick are all getting better. No physician could be more careful or more attentive to his patients than what Dr. Lutz has been to these people during the present troubles.

Thursday, October 30, 1890

Alexander, son of Eupheme Koshevinikoff died today. No new cases of sickness have been reported, but all those who have been sick are in a fair way of recovering.

Friday, October 31, 1890

No more new cases of sickness. The men are up and able to walk around. We can send a full set of watchmen to the rookeries tomorrow. No schooners, not any other vessels have been sighted since the "Bear" left last Sunday.

1900 MEASLES ON ST. PAUL ISLAND

Watson Colt Allis, North American Commercial Company Agent on St. Paul Island in 1900, recollected the measles epidemic as a terrible time on the island.

I remember one tragic time when an epidemic of measles broke out after all the ships had gone south, and we were frozen in for the winter. Ignoring the doctor's orders, the sick natives broke quarantine and went visiting friends until every soul, except one, was down with the disease. The only help the doctor had consisted of myself, the one well native, and Gee Wing. Wing cooked for the entire population about four hundred. I was nurse and coffin-maker. The native dug the graves. But the sick died so fast he was obliged to forego single graves and dig pits which would accommodate three bodies each.¹³

The tale recalled by Mr. Allis spans a year filled with sorrow. The village lost two of its chiefs within months of each other. Nine people died in a week’s time during the month of June from an influenza outbreak that swept through the village. The oldest native Aleut, Kerrick Artomanoff aged 75, succumbed to the virus. Kerrick was born on St. Paul Island about 1826, and was noted by Agent James Judge to be the most knowledgeable man on the island. He had helped with historical recollections during the Fur-Seal Arbitration investigation of 1896–1897. In his interview with Dr. David Starr Jordan on the afternoon of September 6, 1896, he gave a brief account about sealing near the old village at Northeast Point and the “old rookery said to have existed on the North Shore. Artimonof[sic] said in substance”:

I am the oldest man of the island, and was chief for eighteen years during the time when Dr. McIntyre was Superintendent of the company [Alaska Commercial Company]. Marunichen was a small rookery when I was a boy, about seventy-five years ago. In those days a small body of seals gathered on the rocks of the point south of North Shore. There was a little hauling ground behind and another farther east on the next point and on the island adjoining it offshore. The rookery was smaller than Little Polovina is today. I never saw a drive from there, but heard the men talking about it. They used to kill the seals there, and carry the skins to the village at Northeast Point.

Thirty-four years ago (probably in 1834) [1862] the summer was late, so that all around the island was piled up with snow and ice, so that the seals could not land. Thousands of them were killed under the ice, and after that there were very few seals on the island, so that only 100 bachelors a year were killed for several years. They never killed cows. After that time the rookeries were very small for a long time. There were only 2 bulls on the Lagoon; only 7 bulls were left on Gorbach, and all the rookeries, Northeast Point and all, were very much smaller than now. There has not been any more killing of the seals under the ice since 1834. The natives always go now and break roads through the ice to let the seals land.¹⁴

So it was, St. Paul Island had lost its oldest native chief. Two months later at the end of the sealing season, measles appeared at every village household and took its toll of twenty-one more individuals, including Martin Nederazoff, the second chief. From these two illnesses alone, the village of about 200 people lost fifteen percent of its total population. Robert J. Wolfe, assistant professor at the University of Southern California, conducted a study of the 1900 measles and influenza epidemics in Alaska. In describing the health conditions for St. Paul Island he referenced two experts, Henry W. Elliott and David Starr Jordan: “The St. Paul Aleuts at the turn of the century were extremely acculturated compared with many other western Alaskan groups. (Figure 4, Jordan (1899) Plate XXXII). The community had a hospital with a full stock of drugs in addition to the physician providing free medical care (Elliott 1886: 232). The food, clothing and technology of St. Paul so reflected Western patterns that the residents were called the ‘rich Aleuts’ by their southern relatives on the Aleutian Islands. (Elliott 1884: 22; 1886: 233)”¹⁵

John G. Brady, Governor, District of Alaska said, “During the summer, fall, and winter of 1900 the natives upon the Aleutian Islands and the shores of Bering Sea and St. Lawrence Island were suffering from la grippe accompanied by pneumonia and measles. It is estimated that fully 2,000 of them perished”.¹⁶

ST. PAUL ISLAND AGENT LOG OF THE MEASLES EPIDEMIC¹⁷

According to the agent's log, the measles epidemic began on August 28, 1900, when Agafia, wife of George Kochegin, broke out with measles. She was isolated at Halfway Point Watch House under Dr. Ross's supervision. She became well by September 4 and her husband brought her back to the village, but by then the whole village had succumbed to the disease. Dr. Ross notified the men of the village that all should be vaccinated and they agreed.

August 30, 1900

The "Rush" arrived. Lt. Burns reported 75 cases of measles at Unalaska.

August 31, 1900

Three more cases of measles.

Sept. 2, 1900

There is not a family in the village but has one or more of its members sick with measles, in some cases whole families are down.

Sept. 4, 1900

No improvement among the sick. Rice and milk carried to every individual. Mr. Marr rendered valuable assistance in the good work. Dr. Ross is working like a Trojan and predicts that he will bring them all through. Sun shining beautifully. During the afternoon I took the buckboard to H. W. [Half Way] Point and brought George & Agafia Kochegin to the village. George has not been sick at all. Agafia almost well.

Sept. 5, 1900

Nicoli Krukof, Nicoli Gromof, Simeon Nozekof, Anna Lessentona, Mike Kushing, Mary Bogodanof, Mrs. Glotof, and Ellen Volkof who have been acting as nurses and distributors of food and medicine since the epidemic broke out are all down today. There is no one to take their places. The hospital corp today consists of George Kochengin, George Shisuekof, Mar. Marr, Dr. Ross and myself. Soup and rice cooked in Company house was carefully passed around. Mr. Allis has offered everything in the Company's possession for the relief of the sufferers. We would have his personal assistance were he not suffering from rheumatism which incapacitated him from running about.

Vassili Seduli died two hours ago—at 9 p.m. He was quite old and a noted character here. Like the remainder of the natives he suffered with the Grip last June and has been complaining more or less all summer. He was a type of native rapidly disappearing on the Seal Islands. One of the old time Bidarkie men.

Sept. 6, 1900

George Kochergin and George Shisnekof assisted the Doctor in distributing medicine to the sick while Mr. Marr and I carried boiled rice and milk to every house giving each sick person a cupful and more when they wished it. We made two trips one in the morning and again in the afternoon. Karp Buterin and Zahar Tetoff with the assistance of Charles Berg the teamster delivered a sack of coal at every house. Karp Buterin dug Sedulis grave and Mr. Allis although suffering dreadfully from rheumatism made the coffin. Four natives (all who are on their feet), Mr. Marr and I buried the corpse. The teamster drove it to the grave. Driving rain all day.

Sept. 7, 1900

Boiled rice and milk distributed twice today at every house in the village. In a few cases an improvement is noticeable and that is about all. Zahar is complaining this evening and will probably be down tomorrow. Late this afternoon Olga Serebinkof and Stephan Nederazof died of measles. Both have been suffering from tuberculosis for some time and were therefore weak when this epidemic came on.

Sept. 8, 1900

Many of the natives convalescing. Others still in critical condition. Rice and milk distributed but not to so many places as heretofore as some of the convalescents are cooking a little themselves. Mr. Marr and I delivered provisions all around so that none of the sick will have occasion to go outside until they are fully recovered. Olga Serebinkof and Stephan Nederazof were buried this afternoon, Karp dug the graves. Mr. Allis made the coffins and Mr. Marr and I assisted at the obsequies there being but three natives on hand.

Sept 9, 1900

Karp Buterin and George Shisnekof are both sick today. This leaves George Kochugin and Zahar Tetoff as the only native men in the village who are on their feet. Aside from these two new cases there seems to be a general improvement all along the line. The measles are fast disappearing and the Doctor thinks that if they stay indoors and not take cold all will recover.

Sept 10, 1900

Macket Volkof & Aggie Kushin not so well today. The remainder are improving nicely.

Sept 11, 1900

The natives are recovering slowly from the effects of the measles. There are only four critical cases now which is quite a relief. Still the Doctor has forbidden the convalescents to leave their homes. He is fearful of their taking cold and of complications setting in on consequence. Coal was delivered at every house by the native force (consisting of two men) assisted by the companys' teamster and Mr. Marr. Mr. Allis kindly loaning the wagon for the purpose.

Sept. 12, 1900

Aggie Kushin age 45 originally a native of the Kunle [Kuril] Islands died this evening of capillary bronchitis super-induced by measles. His death will be a special loss to the community as he was the best all around workman in the village capable of turning his hand to anything that was to be done and doing everything well. Four of the convalesces suffered a relapse today and the Doctor is very much discouraged. It is difficult to impress upon the minds of the people the possible consequences of their taking cold after an attack of measles. It has not been necessary to distribute food from the kitchen since Sunday as some member of the family in every house is able to do the cooking.

Sept. 13, 1900

Aggie Kushin was buried this p.m. George Kochergin, Zahar Tetoff, Mr. Marr and I acted as pall bearers. Mr. Allis made the coffin; George & Zahar dug the grave. They are the only natives in the village able to turn a hand. Neither have had the measles and both have worked manfully since the breaking out of this epidemic.

Sept. 14, 1900

Kerrick Terrakanof age 46 died during the night of capillary bronchitis super-induced by measles.

Sept 15, 1900

Markel Volkoff age 55 died at 6 p.m.

Sept. 16, 1900

Alexandria Volkoff wife of Markel who died yesterday was found dead in her bed this morning... About noon Philip Sedick died... All three were buried late this afternoon the white men making the coffins and attending to the internment [sic]. On our return from the cemetery Alex Galaktionoff informed us that his wife had just died. Her case has been critical for several days. It is a terrible thing to witness these poor people dying by wholesale and still be unable to do anything except bury them. It is doubtful whether the dreaded small pox with our facilities for vaccinating would have been a greater scourge than this epidemic of measles and its resulting complications.

Sept. 17, 1900

George infant son of Simeon Nozekoff died last night. He was buried this p.m. as was also Mrs. Martha Galaktionof [Galaktioineff] who died yesterday.

Sept. 18, 1900

It is a pleasure to note that there are neither deaths or burials to be recorded today.

Sept. 19, 1900

Anna Terrentona age 47 and a spinster died at an early hour this morning. She was buried this afternoon. This was the first funeral since the epidemic began conducted without the assistance of the white men.

Sept. 20–22, 1900

No changes to report

Sept 23, 1900

Ellen Volkoff age 46 and a spinster died about noon. Her brother and his wife died a week ago.

Sept. 27, 1900

Eupheona Kochooten 56 years old died at noon.

Sept 28, 1900

My unpleasant duty today consists in recording three deaths all victims of measles and resulting complications. There were as follows; Dana Sedick widow 56 years old; Catherine Emauof wife of George age 26; and Lazarus Bogodanof son of Mary Bogodanof 1 year old. The funeral of Eupheona Kochooten took place today. Nearly a gale blowing from the East all day.

Sept. 29, 1900

Peliga widow of Eupheona Kochooten who was buried yesterday died at 4 o'clock this morning. She was buried this p.m. as were also the three who died yesterday making a total of four funerals today.

Sept. 30, 1900

Trefan Kochooten both of whose parents died within a few days had decided to make his home with Alex Melovidov.

Oct. 2, 1900

Martin Merculief age 19 died at 3 o'clock this morning and was buried this afternoon. He was an exceptionally sturdy boy and it seems strange that a month's illness would carry him off.

Oct. 3, 1900

Martiu Nederazoff second Chief died at 2 p.m. today. He was quite recovered a few days ago but unfortunately took a Russian Bath which again laid him up and did for him.

Oct. 12, 1900

Strong S. W. Wind and heavy rain prevented branding today. Arseny Arkashof aged 33 died at 4 o'clock this morning and buried this afternoon. We trust that his death will wind up the long list of fatalities brought on by the measles. Everybody else seems fully recovered.

GENEALOGY OF ST. PAUL ISLAND DURING THE 1920s¹⁸

At the start of the third decade of the twentieth century, the St. Paul Island Aleut native population totaled 188. The island census of December 1928 showed a population increase to 221 individuals. Much happened to make daily life on the island easier than at the start of era under U.S. government control beginning in the 1870s. At that time, families lived in small wood frame homes without indoor plumbing or electricity. As the 1920s advanced, progress brought lighting, indoor running water, automobiles, and tractors as improvements to the sealers' daily lifestyle. New concrete homes replaced many of the older wooden structures. The approach of World War I brought the U.S. Naval Radio Station to the island and it increased the need for better water and an electricity supply. The Naval Station ran its own operation separate from the U.S. Fisheries Station, but both parties helped each other with equipment, food, and manpower whenever the need arose.

 [Nicoli Gromof, (late husband of Juliania) “August 8, 1912. For years the first chief on this island and perhaps the most able man here, ...He had marked executive ability and used it to great effectiveness in handling the men as first chief. The latter position is a most trying one, as not only has the incumbent to represent the native men and voice their wishes and protect their interest, but to keep in mind at the same time the interests of their employer and to protect and further those. This Gromof has done with ability and fairness. He was born in Attu and was 44 years old at his death.”²¹

ST. PAUL ISLAND AND ST. GEORGE ISLAND

PRIBILOF ISLANDS, ALASKA

TRANSLITERATOR'S NOTES FOR THE 1868 CENSUS:

*Throughout, I used the modified Library of Congress Transliteration System which is used in most academic libraries. In the nineteenth century, the soft sign ь was widely used. This practice for terminal soft signs was dropped in the twentieth century. Where the soft sign appeared it shows in the English transliteration as an apostrophe ('). If this list is reproduced, that apostrophe could safely be omitted. Another feature of nineteenth century Russian (now coming back into use) is the letter i. It appears often in this list. In the twentieth century it was replaced by u. There were a few male names that ended in o or a. This is unusual for a male name unless it is a diminutive. It seemed pretty clear to me that that was the handwritten letter, so I made no adjustments. For the most part, I was able to verify nearly all the surnames in the photocopied Records, 1843-1932. Russian Orthodox Greek Catholic Church of America. Diocese of Alaska.

In one column, I included my analysis of the handwritten Russian, so if there are any questions about the accuracy of my transliteration, it would be easy to refer to my interpretation.

I assume that the childrens' ages given as fractions over /12 indicate their age in months.

Abbreviations used:

- n/a not available as far as I could tell
- obs obscured—shadow on photocopy
- ? some question about accuracy—usually due to quality of copy/original

These records omitted the terminal soft sign in the transliteration and also the internal soft signs. The internal ones are normally included in the modified Library of Congress Transliteration System and are indicated by an apostrophe.*

TRANSCRIPTION GUIDE FOR THE 1870-1928 CENSUSES

As requested, I have made every attempt to transcribe both published and handwritten materials precisely as written, including inconsistent spellings, misspellings, and typographic errors. Where I used both handwritten and published versions of a census, I held the handwritten version to be authoritative, and indicated with asterisks and other marks (see above) where the previously published version deviated from the handwritten source. This must be specified in the introduction to these censuses, as it is not explicit within the censuses themselves.

When I was not always able to definitely discern letters and numbers:

- I enclosed in square brackets characters about which I was pretty sure, but still had some doubt, e.g., “Dem[i]tri.” (The most common cases of uncertainty were e/i, o/a, and r/v, and occasionally y/g.)*
- If it seemed that either of two characters were equally likely, I sometimes showed my best and my second best guess, e.g., “Matr[i/o]na.”*
- Completely illegible portions are indicated as [] or [illegible]. Single characters or groups of characters that I could not make a good guess at are transcribed as [] with the number of spaces corresponding to the number of characters I thought were probably there.*

The indication [sic] follows text that might commonly be suspected to be incorrectly transcribed due to being inconsistent (e.g., a family name that is not spelled the same for each family member), spelled in an unusual way (e.g., the woman’s name “Magaret”), or obviously incorrect (e.g., birthdate later than death date, or wildly at odds with age), but that was transcribed exactly as it appeared in the source.

Abbreviations and capitalization have been generally entered as they were in the source, but standardized within a census year (e.g., Inf. for Inf., Inft., infant; mo. for mo., mos.).

St. Paul Is., St. Paul, St. George Is., and St. George (and rarely, St. Pauls) are transcribed as entered in the handwritten censuses, as it is unknown whether the differences are significant.

The exception to precise transcription is punctuation, where some standardization has been attempted:

- Commas have been used in “last name, first name” constructions, for legibility.*
- In dates, the modern standard of a comma between the month and year has been followed, for ease in reading.*
- Within a census, where abbreviations (e.g., of months) were sometimes followed by periods, and sometimes not, the more usual usage was followed.*
- Periods and commas could not consistently be distinguished in the handwritten documents. Periods that appear at apparently random intervals in some handwritten texts have not been transcribed.*

- Ditto marks have been retained in some places, to indicate the look of the original, but in reduced numbers. I have replaced them with words where the marks are excessive or their reference might be unclear. The archaic abbreviation "do." was to replace either with ditto marks or the corresponding words.

Underlining has been duplicated so as to indicate the look of the original, where practical.

Where it is clear that notes or changes were made later, in the original or in another hand, this has been indicated in footnotes.

Notes
* Census Takers—Charles Bryant, Agent; Henry W. Elliott, Asst. Agent.
a This title heads the 1873 census written in Russian, on pages 5-13, which is not included here.
b This heading on page 15 begins the English section, in which census information for the three years 1873, 1874, and 1875 is given for each family in turn. These censuses are here divided up by years, with the information for each year found in the census for that year.
A note at the beginning of the 1873 census in English states, “The names are written so as to give the sound as they are pronounced in Russian.” This included in various places breaking the names into syllables and adding underlining to indicate spoken stress. Those indications are duplicated here.

Notes
This individual, or a member of this family, was transferred to another page of the original (handwritten) census.
a This heading is borrowed from the 1873 census written in Russian, on pages 5-13, which is not included here. The 1874 census did not have its own heading.
b This date appeared in the left margin next to the name of each head of a household. Census information for the three years 1873, 1874, and 1875 is given in English for each family in turn, but this information is here divided up by years, with the information for each year found in the census for that year.
A note at the beginning of the 1873 census in English states, "The names are written so as to give the sound as they are pronounced in Russian." In 1873, this included in various places breaking the names into syllables and adding underlining to indicate spoken stress. Those indications do not appear in succeeding years, and it is unclear to what extent the 1874 and 1875 census recorders continued the intention of spelling so as to indicate the Russian pronunciation.
Where families split, as by children leaving to begin new families, the note "transferred to page ---" appears below the census of the natal family, to indicate that a family member would appear on another page of the census in future years. Such notes are here marked with the symbol . Note that these page numbers do not refer to the current publication. In some cases the name of the family member transferred to another page was also crossed out, and in that case that individual's name is also here marked with **.
c Lookelian's name and age were crossed out, and the note "died July 9th (error)" added.

Notes

* See page 262 of Agent Log for more information on family.

 This individual, or a member of this family, was transferred to another page of the original (handwritten) census.

a This heading is borrowed from the 1873 census written in Russian, on pages 5-13, which is not included here. The 1875 census did not have its own heading.

b This date appeared in the left margin next to the name of most heads of households; others were preceded by the statement "Corrected January 1st 1875." Census information for the three years 1873, 1874, and 1875 is given in English for each family in turn, but this information is here divided up by years, with the information for each year found in the census for that year.

A note at the beginning of the 1873 census in English states, "The names are written so as to give the sound as they are pronounced in Russian." In 1873, this included in various places breaking the names into syllables and adding underlining to indicate spoken stress. Those indications do not appear in succeeding years, and it is unclear to what extent the 1874 and 1875 census recorders continued the intention of spelling so as to indicate the Russian pronunciation.

Where families split, as by children leaving to begin new families, the note "transferred to page ---" appears below the census of the natal family, to indicate that a family member would appear on another page of the census in future years. Such notes are here marked with the symbol . Note that these page numbers do not refer to the current publication. In some cases the name of the family member transferred to another page was also crossed out, and in that case that individual's name is also here marked with **.

c The note "(9)" was added later.

d The letters "eena" were written in above the final 'a' of the last name.

Notes
a All entries in the Remarks column appear to have been added later, in various hands other than the original.
b A note added later in another hand reads: "Married Jan 20 89." Another note beginning next to Pelega's name are largely illegible, but may say "Died Feb. 11th 18[]1 and definitely end with "age 17."
c This family was entered below the list of government agents, with a note "omitted in proper place by mistake."

a In the handwritten original, 1912 marriages, births and deaths precede the 1912 census, but they are shown here following the census, for consistency with other years b Lines were drawn through the names of numerous individuals in this census. These have not been noted here.
c This remark appears to have been added later, in a different hand.
d It appears that this individual was inserted here later, in a different hand.
e The family relation and corresponding birthdate appear to have been recorded by the original census taker, and the name (and a question mark after the word 'son') appear to have been written later in another hand.
f The words 'St. Paul' were later crossed out and 'Unalaska' was written in, apparently in the same hand.
g It appears that this individual was inserted here later, in a different hand. She is also listed in the original census as residing with Alexander Melividov in family #26.
h This remark appears to have been added later, in a different hand. There are also extensive notes in the Remarks column for this and the following two individuals, which are illegible in this copy.
i The name and other information of this individual appears to have been crossed out by the original recorder of the census.

Notes a This census did not have any column headings. The columns are as in prior censuses, with the addition of an expanded ‘Age’ column that expresses age in years, months and days. These may not always agree with the date of birth, but this has not been noted here. b Ouliana Gromoff’s age and birthdate were corrected in the same hand to 46-5-29 and Jany 2, 1869, respectively. c Corrected in the same hand to 19-4-11. d Corrected in the same hand to 3-4-16. e Remark in original reads: “See St. George census. Married Stepan Merculioff, of St. George Island, Aug 14, 1914. Removed to St. George Island Sept 2, 1914.” f Corrected in the same hand to 24-11-13. g Natalia Mazeekin’s age and birthdate were corrected in the same hand to 28-9-21 and Sept 9, 1886, respectively. h Corrected in the same hand to Mary. i Corrected in the same hand to Aug 27, 1892. j Her first name was corrected to Haretina. k Corrected to 30-8-27. l Corrected to 12-1-10. m A note in the margin of the original reads: “Dropped in 1915”
